Masters in the classical war games, Yuji Nishizawa and Tetsuya Mizuguchi, have joined hands to bring you a wholly new experience of role-playing game. This time, we have made a fantasy action RPG about a world in which the player becomes a wizard. The game world in which you roam is a fantasy world made by integrating bits and pieces of the classic fantasy scenarios with the powerful magic power of the Advanced Dungeons & Dragons and its vast world. This is an action RPG where you are told to shine in a world where the sun is setting, bringing an untold tale to the heroes who rise up. A world made of stars. Together with the power of darkness, the starting character appears in a false name as an ordinary person, and he becomes the protagonist on his own two feet. With his thirst for adventure and battle underway, in this world where the sun is setting, you navigate through a vast, open world of countless unfamiliar locations. This game is a revolutionary RPG full of magic for a fantasy RPG. In a world made of stars, the games below will beckon to you: Exclusive zone: A quiet town in which you can enjoy everyday life. #### Pre-order DQVIII on Amazon

Please note that prices and availability are subject to change. Some offers may not be available in all countries.

What's cool about this is that it's at a discounted price, so you get the PAL Japanese version AND a bit of bonus content over the US version! Also, there's no region locking on Party. If you have a Japanese Xbox 360 with a Digital Deluxe version, or a Japanese Xbox Live account, you can get it from your local Sony or Microsoft stores for a price at launch. You also get physical DLC priced at JP¥3630 ($46) and a PS3 Goodies pack. It comes with a PS3 voucher that can be used at some PlayStation stores for 60,000 Zone Points ($4.50) or US$2.20. It comes with DQI and DQII, plus an artbook called the Watcher's Book. It also comes with some PPE code - use it with DQIV and you get a 3-day free demo on the PS3. It's a Hong Kong-made game, from a Hong Kong publisher (Soedesco), and hits retail in Japan on April 23, but you can pre-order it now direct from Square-Enix. You can pledge a RRP of HK$46.00. I'll also include some spoiler free pictures from the E3 press conference to give you a preview.

Field of the Invention The present invention relates to a method and apparatus for adjusting a variable halftone dot screen used in a printing press. 2. Description of the Prior Art The halftone dot printing press is widely used for printing halftone dot images such as monochromatic or black and white films and color photographs. In general, in the printing press, to meet the requirement of high resolution, the configuration of the halftone dot screen is complex. It is necessary to precisely control the size and the position of the dots on the printed sheet so as to accurately reproduce a photograph or a film image. This requirement of high resolution must be achieved in printing processes of the press which are very complex, including the paper feeding processes, the paper carrying processes and the sheet-stack processes. In such printing processes, in order to reproduce a photograph or a film image, it is required that, when a light image is exposed to a negative and then printed, the dot screen be accurately adjusted to eliminate an aberrational relationship between the dot screen and the photographic printing means of the printing press, so that the dot screen will match the positional relationship between an image negative and the photographic printing means. This matching of the halftone dot screen with the positional relationship between the image negative and the photographic printing means is known as matching the halftone dot screen to the negative. For this reason, in the conventional printing presses, the dot screen adjustment is manually conducted by adjustment workers and print engineers. A great deal of skill and experience are required to accurately adjust the halftone dot screen. The conventional halftone dot screen is adjustably controlled by an image adjusting means which is in a form of a mechanical or electronic optical apparatus. However, because of the complexity of the printing presses, accurate adjustment of the halftone dot screen is difficult to accomplish. Recently, in order to reduce the amount of time and labor necessary for the dot screen adjustment process, there has been a proposal to automatically adjust the halftone dot screen in the printing press. For example, U.S. Pat. No. 4,743,948, entitled "APPARATUS FOR MATCHING A HALFTONE DOT SCREEN WITH A PHOTOGRAPHIC PRINTING MEANS IN A
