State of the art analysis and physics engine, which allows for amazingly detailed, real-life locomotive modelling. All features that are usually available only in reality-based engines Loco dynamics - which ensures realistic locomotion. The engine follows the laws of physics by which it is driven. Each movement of the locomotive results in rotational movement of the tires (axle) and of all other parts of the loco, starting with the four wheels. Both, loco and carriages are controlled by a software, based on well-known vehicle models. This level of performance is combined with individually programmed motion, applied to the engines and the coaches. This results in an unparalleled visual and audio presentation. ## What's new:

The GP38-2 trains of BNSF are very easy to see while being very quiet and efficient. The locomotives of BNSF tend to have a more sharpened nose with much of the Class GP38-2 being GP38-4 locomotives in external aspect. From round the world... Westby for your latest Mark 1 goods at Trainz. GP38-2 'Pumpkins' (painted in BNSF E3215-1 'Gobbla gobbla') The GP38-2 model by Westby represents the lighter version of the main GP38, the GP38-2. The GP38 was relatively standard GP38-2. Westby added a few small touches (such as the more pointed nose) and limited the nozzles to two per class. Their first variant is showing on the GP38-2 model. Westby came to model railroaders with an E3215-1 locomotive, the BNSF E3215-1 'Gobbla gobbla' aka Western Star 'Ak-Star-R-D' in real life. Inspired by a visit to the much ado about nothing E3215 I thought westerner would eat balloons if I'm not mistaken. ? And the preparation of 'riddles'. ♥ ♥ The E3215 is the mainstay unit of BNSF for many years: several thousand locomotives. It's as the 'Hobo Wagon' as Australia calls it. A versatile locomotive, it was often used for fast freight (incl. the Australian-implemented long haul passenger service, the VLocity, using the E3215-1). It is also a workhorse on the BNSF network. And it's in almost every graphics pack of Trainz! The GP38-2 comes with two heads, of course. You may recognize the decals from other models, especially the Class VDS-11 (aka VMC-11 in the Trainz world). The loco also comes with a good variety of variants, although no oil storage: GP38-2 Westby GP38-2 Headlight Variants GP38-2 LVD Variant GP38-2 Boiler Variants GP38-
