What's new:

Trivia Trivia The birth of American snooker (cue sport) is the moment when Harry Vardon and his son Ted Vardon came up with a first round contest in one of their London hotels for £10, which a shareholder/patron called Bingham donated, after attending a Vardon tournament. When the Clifton Fives tournament in 1885 to 1905 was held in Clifton, this article was satirised with the following cartoon: The popular days of the English newspaper press during the 19th Century were created by the great Victorian journalists who created themselves characters that began to be seen on the characterised by the famous Drury Lane Comedy actor W. J. MacQueen. The characters were: Swipes, a playboy, Punchinello, a supposed Italian transvestite, in a pantomime villain, Fagin, the leader of the three thieves, the all powerful Fenella, who cannot hold her liquor, and the pedant Theophilus, who is the nemesis of Thomas Hardy. John Jefferys and Arthur Murphy invented stories about all these people, making them funnier than their memories of them. There were later characters from Bunty, such as The Sorcerer. Janet and Dean were two brothers who wrote, performed and directed the first rock 'n roll movie, performed at a Dean Martin Memorial movie marathon. In 1883, a feud erupted between hound dogs Cearbhall and Gorey. This was settled by burning down the hounds' kennel. The publicist Frank Cunnington invented the word "Baedeker", meaning a guidebook. Baedeker's 1883 guide to Switzerland, "Switzerland & the Alps" was the first pictorial travel journal available for holidaymakers. Henry Tandey, the first blind ping pong player, was born in England in 1882. When he was 5, he lost his sight, but as a child he attracted the attention of the tennis world thanks to his bump of a little toe, which he could use to give far better bounces than he had as a sighted player. In March 1884, the first modern Derby was run in Epsom, at the lowest possible total of four. The Derby is less of a race and more of an occasion, but for early in the 20th Century, it's still a de-facto test of stamina, strength
